After a prolonged siege of coal conservation by the light and power plant of Farmington, which could not be evaded owing to the infrequent shipments of fuel to this city, the supply is now increased to something near the city's needs. This has resulted in the burning of street lights all night for the past week or more. The great convenience, even necessity for street lights can be more fully appreciated after being deprived of night illumination for some time.
The grocery store of the Byn Yann Co., Inc., in Farmington is now open and doing business. The people of this community generally know and appear to appreciate the fact that they can make material savings on many articles they purchase there. For instance, they are saving their customers 4c on every pound of sugar purchased of them. They are selling navy beans at 7 1-2c a pound that some other dealers are charging 12 1-2c a pound for, and so on throughout a long list of necessities.

You will miss a rare treat if you fail to hear him Saturday evening. He closely followed Sam Priest in announcing as a candidate for the U. S. Senate.
The announcement of J. W. Boswell, of Doe Run, appears in this issue as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Associate Judge of the County Court from the Second District of St. Francois county. Mr. Boswell is 52 years old, and has spent practically his entire life in this county. He is known as an active, enterprising and splendid citizen, whose occupation has always been farming and the lively business. While he is a life-long working Democrat, this is his first entrance into the political arena on his own account. His many friends feel that he has splendid qualifications to serve most acceptably in looking after the county's business. He is strong for good roads, and should be chosen for the place he seeks will do everything in his power toward keeping the public highways up to the highest possible state of efficiency, as well as looking carefully after all county business.

NOTES ABOUT THE STATE HOSPITAL

I followed my pastor out to the State Hospital chapel a few Sundays ago to see that he got back safely, and as he acquitted himself very creditably, indeed, they permitted him to leave without keeping him on probation.
Going gave me a bright idea, namely, that I could, by attending church services there regularly, have the opportunity to hear all the pastors of the town without necessarily missing a service of my own church, as the services at the Hospital are at 2 o'clock every Sunday afternoon and given in turn by the different pastors of the town.
I notice that Dr. Eaton does not merely give the privilege of having services, but attends with his wife, and both assist in the song service. He also personally sees the patients and insists that they go to church. His staff was also present.
The behavior of the audience of patients was far better than that of some people in the audience of my own church this morning. A dear old lady dressed in soft gray took an aisle seat four rows back from the front. From her rapt attention and pale, thin face I judged her to be rather a "shut-in" and that listening to a sermon was a treat that she was not privileged to have very often. Now enters youth and beauty in one in the shape of a beautiful young woman escorted by the usher and accompanied by a young man and little child. Since there was not room enough for the three in the row pointed out by the usher, the young woman steps back to the seat occupied by the old lady in gray and motions to her to move farther on. She very reluctantly does so but not far enough to suit the imperious beauty and she motions her further on until the old lady is at the end of the row, and if her hearing isn't good the whole sermon is spoiled for her. I saw nothing like that in the State Hospital chapel.
After services, stopping at the Administration Hall to leave a package for a patient, I found a lady from St. Louis who had come to see a patient, not knowing the ruling that Thursdays only are visiting days. On hearing this information she burst into tears and things began to appear as if a new patient would have to be admitted instead of a visitor. However, after explaining the impossibility of permitting her to see her invalid sister in the usual way the Superintendent set about finding an unusual way which was found, of course, only through his courtesy and that of the official called upon to bring the patient to the Administration Hall.
It seems that Sunday visitors have so abused their privileges that the attendants, in a body, have utterly refused to have any more Sunday visiting and have chosen Thursdays only as visiting day. Much as the Superintendent would like to accommodate worthy visitors he can't without giving the undesirables a chance, too.
While it seems that his help rules him, yet Dr. Eaton knows when to take the reins in his own hands, which he did a few days ago when he discharged an attendant for slapping a patient, first giving her an impromptu lecture.
With the coming of the spring days and the song birds and flowers, outdoor life is insisted upon for all who can be out.
While errors and mistakes can and do occur here the same as anywhere else, I think all patrons of the institution can rest assured that the management stands ready to correct when these are brought to their attention, which I'm sure we can't say of all managements of institutions.
We hope and pray for the speedy recovery of the injured Secretary whose useful and efficient service has meant so much to the Hospital.
A PATIENT'S DAUGHTER.

AGREEMENT ON LEAGUE PLANK SEEMS NEAR

Chicago, June 7.—There were unmistakable signs today that Republican leaders are rapidly approaching an agreement on a platform.
The danger of a fight on the floor of the national convention has been about eliminated, it is stated on high authority.
A series of conferences between progressive and old guard leaders culminated in a heart-to-heart talk between Senator Borah of Idaho and Senator Watson of Indiana, about a League of Nations plank.
It was understood that Borah, one of the leaders of the Senate "irreconcilables," flatly informed Watson, spokesman for the old guard, that a reaffirmation of the doctrines of Washington and Monroe regarding entangling alliances must be written into the platform in language that would leave no doubt as to its meaning.
Watson is understood to have informed Borah that he, National Chairman Hays and other Republican leaders were desirous of drafting a League of Nations plank on which any one named as a candidate for President could stand.
Hays Opposed Watson.
Watson is ambitious to become chairman of the committee on resolutions. Borah is said to have assured Watson of his support on condition that the League of Nations plank adopted was satisfactory to him, to Senator Johnson of California, and to other progressives who are bitterly opposed to President Wilson's League of Nations.
It is known Watson is not unmindful of the support of Borah and Johnson. Chairman Hays sought to have Ogden L. Mills of New York named chairman of the committee on resolutions. He was opposed to Watson heading the committee because of Watson's close association with the Old Guard.
A hot fight over the chairmanship of the committee moved swiftly today. Watson is facing opposition from delegates who, while not opposed to him personally, declare they are "against the Senate getting everything."
They argue a Senator should not be chosen chairman of the committee, as Senator Lodge is already slated to be temporary chairman of the convention and Senator Smoot is expected to head the committee on credentials.
Borah on Committee
Borah was placed in an advantageous position in the treaty fight long after his arrival from Washington. The Idaho delegation met and, without touching on the badly mixed presidential situation, selected Borah as Idaho's representative on the committee on resolutions. This was a signal victory for the Idaho Senator.
As a member of the committee he will be able to participate in every move that is made in drafting the platform.
Senator Capper, a Progressive, who voted for ratification of the treaty, with the Lodge reservations, and Senator McCormick of Illinois, an "irreconcilable," were among the Senators who predicted the treaty issue would be successfully met by the convention.
Outline of Plank
It was understood the league plank would set forth four outstanding features on which the Republican leaders were confident they would be sustained by an overwhelming majority of the people:
A denunciation of the League of Nations covenant espoused by President Wilson.
Unqualified approval of the stand taken by the Republican majority of the Senate in refusing to commit the American people to the League of Nations without the Lodge reservations.
The creation of an international course of arbitration in lieu of the league plan as formulated by President Wilson and others of the "big four" at Versailles.
A ringing reaffirmation of the doctrines of Washington and Monroe that the American people be kept out of entangling foreign alliances.
Such a plank would meet the views of all elements of the Republican party, it was predicted, and would enable Senator Lodge, in his keynote address as temporary chairman of the committee, to clearly enunciate a treaty and league issue on which the Republican party will be prepared to stand or fall.

LILLIE IRENE HINKLE

Who for seven weeks had been confined to her home through sickness, passed away May 27, 1920.
She was the wife of Clifford Hinkle, the son of G. W. Hinkle, a well known and highly respected citizen of Farmington. Young Mr. Hinkle met his wife while he and his parents were in Colorado. They were united in marriage last February and came to Missouri soon afterward. Since that time the young couple have been making their home with their father-in-law, near Farmington.
Mrs. Hinkle became afflicted with that dread disease, cancer, and though only 17 years of age the attack was so malignant that it was pronounced incurable from the first. An operation was performed in the effort to save her life, but the attempt proved hopeless.
Mrs. Hinkle was a young woman of a remarkably attractive personality, and most charming in her disposition. Even during her sickness the optimism and cheerfulness of her nature was most remarkable and she met the issues of her struggle for life with a strong faith and the spirit of a Christian believer.
A most sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved husband and her family who mourn their great loss.
Work and win out—wish and "wink" out.

A COWARDLY EVASION

The passing of the bonus bill by the House of Representatives is neither an exhibition of gratitude and good will nor a step toward final action.
The vote meant nothing. Two hundred and eighty-nine members voted aye. But almost one hundred of them had already, in effect, voted in the negative. Only when they were forced out into the open where the ex-soldiers of their district, and the friends of the ex-soldiers, could see exactly what they were doing, did they change their votes to favor the bill.
And then they voted with the full belief that the bill would either be killed in committee in the Senate, or held back until after summer recess, and with the knowledge that President Wilson would veto the bill if it ever reached him as it is now drawn.
The proposal to pay the soldiers a bonus is not honestly before Congress. It is coupled with provisions which would make it a one-sided and throttling tax. A fair and honest proposal to raise the money for the bill by squeezing it out of the men who made money by the war, the men who in effect traded in the wounds and suffering of our soldiers, has not been made.
Whether or not the bill as it stands could or should ever be passed is doubtful. What is not doubtful is the cowardice of Congress in dodging and delaying the whole matter, until every ex-soldier in the country, and every friend of the ex-soldier, is angry and amazed.
What Congress has said in effect is, "We will do nothing unless we are forced, and then we will do nothing at the expense of our friends, the profiteers."
What do the people who elected these shilly-shallyers think of the exhibition?—Chicago Herald and Examiner.
